CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 2nd,
The races to day were well attend large crowd of spectators, in spite of exceedingly cold weather. Several trotts took place and were well contested. It is expected there will be a sharp competition, and should the ture be a little more favorable, a g course is an excellent order and only a distance from the village, from which voyagers are in waiting for the triparties to and from the coast. The thermometer here this morning was 23° below with bright sunshine.

It removes wrinkles and softens the regular use of MURRAY & LANNAN'S IDA WATER at the toilet tends to prevent wrinkles, the softness of the face is due to it taking away the natural action of the cuticle to form into wrinkles.

DAILY INTELLIGENCER.

By Mrs. HARRIET LEVINE.

Author of "The Double Life," "Treason,"

"What is the meaning of this long preamble?" interrupted Lord Thornhurst, half impatiently, yet not unkindly. "Come to the point, Watie. Have I been rubbed by any of the gardeners? Is there anything wrong going on?"

"Your lordship can decide that better than I can," replied the gardener, with an effort. "I'll tell you the point, my lord.

This evening, after trimming the plants in the conservatory, I carried out a big load of twigs, branches, and dead leaves, and loaded them on to a barrow, and when I was long way as usual to the back yard,

I left the conservatory door open. As I back, a long time afterward, I see the door is still open. I come to the steps and out dash a man. I tried to grapple him, but he dashes over the side of the steps, and runs down the lawn into the back garden.

I think it my duty to tell your lordship, and here I am, my lord.

The gardener eyed his pursuer for a moment. He found it harder work to address the man with his simple story than to engage in the hardest manual labor.

"A man sprang out of the conservatory," exclaimed Lord Thornhurst, quickly.

"Have you searched the place, to see if no accomplices were hidden in the dark alleys?"

"Yes, my lord, but there was no compliment."

"At what hour did you see the man?"

"About half past six o'clock, my lord.

There on the stroke of the dinner bell."

Lord Thornhurst looked graver.

"Had the fellow been a little earlier," he thought, "I might have seen him."

The appearance of a burglar might well have accounted for her agitation and alarm.

"After a few moments' thought he determined.

"How did he look—this burglar? Give me a complete description of him, as nearly as you can. Wait a moment. I will put the household on its guard."

"He was not a burglar, my lord," answered the gardener, "but he was a very odd giant. He was tall, and a little stooped, and had a pale bluish sort of face, and eyes like lightning. He wore a long, dark cloak, and a low hat drawn down over his eyes. He was a gentleman, my lord.

"You mean, he looked like a gentleman," interrupted Lord Thornhurst. "He couldn't be a gentleman, for gentlemen don't enter the house of strangers by stealth. He was, probably, a burglar of the swell kind."

"Watie shook his head obstinately.

"He was a gentleman born and bred. I don't mean to say he was a first-class gentleman, but he was a gentleman."

"He was a little down in the world, I take it, but he was a gentleman, with the manner and breeding which no swell can interfere with."

Lord Thornhurst looked amazed.

"You could not have had a great deal of time to study the man's manners, Watie," said, "but I think, indeed, you had a favorable opportunity."

"My wife, my lord, my lord, and "What, my lord, my lord, and

"Why did your wife see the fellow too?"

"Yes, my lord. He came to the lodge just after dusk, and he was by the fire and warmed himself, and he asked questions about my wife, and she answered him.

"Your wife did not answer his importuous questions? I am proceeding, is exactly that of a burglar who questions the servants of a family to discover the habits of the males of the house, and the hiding place of valuable things. Your wife must have seen the man about his business, or better still, he summoned you."

"But this man was a gentleman," persisted Watie. "He told me a wife that he was an old friend of my wife's, and that he knew my wife and her father from their band and. And he didn't ask about jewels or plate, but he asked if my wife had a daughter by her first husband, living, and how many children she had, and when my wife told him that my wife had two sons, he turned pale and then red, and his wife said, 'My wife said, 'My wife said,

'My wife said, 'My wife said, 'My wife said,

'My wife said, 'My wife said, 'My wife said,

THE SENATE.

In the Senate the debate on the second reading of the Pacific Railway Bill was resumed. Mr. Booth continued his speech, and at six o'clock closed by moving the adjournment, after which Mr. Mc-Callum spoke in support of the contract.

Mr. Haythorne spoke at some length against the Bill.

Mr. Howland moved the adjournment of

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7, 1881.

From the Mail's Correspondent.

PRIVATE DAY.

The accumulation of private business has been such that it is not possible to work to clear it off to-day, and considerable progress was made in the task.

It will be noticed that the Minister of Railways said that one cargo of grain had been shipped from Montreal to London, and that the Government was not prepared to be the subject of a private bill. This is the fulfillment of an experiment that was proposed by Mr. Booth, and which was carried out in 1878, when he was then Premier.

It is a curious coincidence that the death of the late Mr. Booth occurred on the day of the anniversary of the day when he was then Premier.

There is a very interesting discussion in regard to this matter there is now present in Ottawa a very influential delegation from Halifax. It consists of the Mayor of Halifax, Mr. Tolson, ex-M.P., and a number of influential business and merchants.

These gentlemen have had interviews with the Government, and with the view of obtaining some increased terminal facilities at Halifax, as well as favorable rates

LADY THORNBURGH'S DAUGHTER.

By Mrs. HARRIS LEWIS.

Author of "The Double Life," "Treason in Court," &c., &c.

"When we recover Georgia, it will be the marriage that is the child of the cheerful. "As for the rest, we may tell at some future period, or we may say that I see no need for the revelation.

Since we adopted the practice of secrecy at the beginning, it is likely now to stir up a storm. I had been much obliged to have foreseen trouble, and told Lady Thornburgh the truth before her marriage. But how could I have known her ladyship's disloyalty? How could I have guessed that she would turn up again? I even believed, as she said, that Georgia was dead. Why did I write falsely that she was dead?

"To cause us to give over our search for her, and to the marriage. I, I, I, I, I, I, your sympathy and readiness to assist us have taken a load from my mind. I am happy for the moment for me to be in London.

"That summer was, as the reader knows, marked by Holm's success in finding him. It came at last, to the great joy of Lady Thornburgh, that Holm was mentioned at the family table as the winner of a trip to town and asked his father to accompany him. Why did he write falsely that she was dead?

"To cause us to give over our search for

her, and to the marriage. I, I, I, I, I, I,

your sympathy and readiness to assist us

have taken a load from my mind. I am happy for the moment for me to be in

5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

City and Vicinity.

THERE was a very slim attendance on the market this morning.

THERE was but one inmate of the cell last night—a prisoner.

The fight on the Curling rink is again in good playing condition.

No. 4 Company, 40th Battalion, resumes its training in the army of N. 1. Company.

MR. ARCHEL FORDS arrived in town by the noon train, and is staying at the Dufresne Hotel.

The flag was flying from the tower of the market building all day in honor of Hanlan's latest victory.

The post office has been besieged by children all day, and the unfortunate clerks were kept at the window for hours.

The change in temperature came just in time to prevent the breaking up of the ice on the river, which was fully expected on the 13th.

"CHARLES" deer, who murmured, as they strolled along the other evening, and gazed upward at the bejeweled, and the bejeweled, which is Venus, and which is Athena.

WORKMEN were engaged to labor in tearing down the old platform in the City Hall and erecting a smaller one, in order to afford room for a greater number of seats at the dining-table.

"Wax, Franky," exclaimed a mother, leaning at a friend's, "I never knew you to be a second second piece of pie at home!"

The "real" to use, and Franky was proceeded with his pie-eating.

The fishermen on the bay have not met with much success lately, so in consequence of the short supply dealers are paying five per cent for fish on the ice. This is an unusually high price, but the market is warranted.

MR. ARCHEL FORDS is to be entertained at an informal banquet in the Dufresne Hotel on Monday night by the officers of the 40th Battalion. Mr. Ford was once a military man, and probably this fact was one of his greatest assets as a war correspondent.

GENTLEMEN.

Ontario Legislature.

After routine a good deal of time was spent in the discussion of two resolutions, which were disposed of, one by a division, the other by a vote of 10 to 9.

Mr. Orlagh's motion looking to the publication of the Departmental reports as soon as they are ready, whether the House may be in session or not. This proposal was strongly endorsed by Mr. Miller and Mr. Lester, and was carried by a vote of 10 to 9.

This amendment was carried on division by a majority of 10 to 9.

To abolish the $10,000 grant to the Agricultural and Horticultural Association on the resolution was long and practical.

Mr. Graham was followed on the same side by Messrs. Dryden, Ross, Galloway, Hay, and Ferris. Speeches against the motion were made by Messrs. Wood, Broder, Ballantyne, Boulton, Gibson, Denison, and others.

There was a very general admission on all hands that Mr. Graham's motion was a good one, and that some change was needed, but some were not prepared to go as far as Mr. Graham proposed.

At the suggestion of Mr. Wood, who promised to have the whole matter looked into, the motion was not carried.

A motion by Mr. Miller relating to railway scrip was unopposed and carried with great applause.

After a number of private bills had been introduced, Mr. Miller's motion relating to the House of Commons was adopted.

At the suggestion of Mr. Wood, who promised to have the whole matter looked into, the motion was not carried.

SOLD POPULARITY

The popularity of Dr. Dow's Stomach Linctus is solid. It is based on the foundations of science. It is the only cure of rheumatism by its full, complete action. It also cures the most violent neuralgia, contracted joints, cramps in muscles, rheumatism, bruises, &c. There can be no more effective cure for these ailments. It does not require physician to tell whether the patient is very much cured. I have used it for years. I was in pain, now I am free of it. This I think that all remedies failed to banish the pain.
